

Kevin Connelly

Star of Dead Ringers, Kevin Connelly is an extremely talented impressionist, comedian and after dinner speaker.

Kevin is in great demand both for sportsmen's dinners and corporate events. His impressions are not limited to sporting personalities and his extensive repertoire includes politicians and television characters. Richard Littlejohn wrote in his Sun column that Kevin did a "wickedly accurate impression of Tony Blair".

Born in Middlesbrough, Kevin found fame while still at school, mimicking his fellow students and of course, his teachers. As his 'turns' became more popular, he gained confidence and included a few leading personalities into his repertoire.

He has recorded numerous voiceovers for both television and radio. In 1997 he recorded the voice over for the highly acclaimed Channel Four drama/comedy on the running of a professional football club: 'Eleven Men Against Eleven'. The film starred James Bolam and Timothy West.

Kevin's many television credits include: BBC's Sports Review of 1993, Des O'Connor's World Cup Party, The Full Motty, We're On Our Way to Wembley, The Sports Show, It's Just Not Cricket with Rory Bremner, Saint & Greavsie, Grandstand and The Pavilion End. He was also given his own show on Tyne Tees Television. Kevin was part of Talk Radio's World Cup team and the BBC'S Dead Ringers. This programme won the Best Radio Comedy at British Comedy Awards 2001.

Kevin is a very popular corporate after dinner speaker.

"The evening was a great success for us and feedback from guests is excellent....I will certainly be recommending Kevin to anyone who is looking for a after dinner speaker, he was superb!"

NOF Energy

Dead Ringers Comedy Impressionist